Balanced Budget 1960 National GOP Theme

By D. HAROLD OLIVER

WASHINGTON (AP)—Republicans, building for the 1960 elections on the ruins of the 1958 defeats, today pick a new national chairman and a national convention site.

A Republican victory in 1960 was predicted Friday night by both President Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

Eisenhower sent a message to the Republican National Committee meeting here from his Georgia vacation headquarters. He said such a victory will be assured "if we stand resolutely for, and work unflinchingly to implement, those fundamentals in which we believe as Republicans."

The President told the committee the nation supports a balanced budget.

Nixon told a banquet audience it is not enough for Republicans to believe in balanced budgets and private enterprise. A sure candidate for the party's 1960 presidential nomination, the vice president won a standing ovation from the National Committee members.

The committee winds up a two-day "road to victory" meeting today by electing a new chairman to succeed the retiring M. Allen McCormack of Connecticut. He is expected to be Sen. Thurston B. Morton of Kentucky, an Eisenhower supporter and friend of Nixon.

The question of a place and date for the 1960 convention also was to be settled, with Chicago and the week of July 28 in high favor. Five other cities submitted bids.

Governor Is Against Dog Racing at Spa

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Gov. Orval E. Faubus today came out against a proposed dog racing track at Hot Springs.

Faubus took the unusual step of inspecting a large advertisement in the Arkansas Democrat. His opposition to the proposed dog track seemed to be the main theme of a detailed statement in which he reviewed the present horse and dog racing situation in Arkansas.

Litigation over whether the dog track was approved by Garland County voters at a local option election now is before the Arkansas Supreme Court. A decision is expected soon.

Faubus' statement came the day after it was disclosed that the Oaklawn Jockey Club oppose a second horse racing meet at Hot Springs this fall. A group of Hot Springs businessmen and public officials had suggested the second meeting. The stand of the Jockey Club holders of the horse racing franchise, apparently settled the matter.

In the advertisement, which he delivered personally to the Democrat, Faubus said members of a committee from the Arkansas State Racing Commission, also had told him they were ready to recommend against fall horse racing.

"We may, therefore, conclude that there will be no fall (horse) race meet at Oaklawn," the Faubus advertisement said.

"However," the advertisement continued, "this does not preclude the possibility of fall racing at Hot Springs, and the purpose of this statement is to so inform the people."

Faubus then reviewed the dog race case with its attendant possibility that there could be dog racing in Hot Springs this fall.

And he said in effect that he hoped the Supreme Court would reverse a lower court decision which held the proposed dog track had been legally approved at the local option election.

He said there would be little chance of blocking dog racing at Hot Springs should the Supreme Court rule that the proposed track had been approved.

Faubus said it was the intention of the 1957 Legislature that a majority of all qualified electors within a county be required to approve any proposed new track before it would be established.

In the Garland County election a majority of those voting favored the track.

The Garland County Election Commission ruled the proposed track had failed because those favoring it did not constitute a majority of the county's qualified electors.

Former Circuit Judge C. Floyd Huff overruled the commission. He said it was impossible to determine under terms of the 1957 act how many "qualified electors" there were in the county. He ruled that the majority of those voting was sufficient for approval of the proposed track.

The election commission appealed Huff's decision to the Supreme Court, where it now is pending.

GOPs Get Set to Pick New Chairman

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Republican National Committee gathered today for a two-day meeting to further its party, rebuilding plan, choose a new chairman and pick a convention site.

The important decisions will come Saturday, when a new chairman is elected to succeed the retiring M. Allen McCormack of Connecticut. He is expected to be Sen. Thurston B. Morton of Kentucky, an Eisenhower supporter and friend of Nixon.

The question of a place and date for the 1960 convention also was to be settled, with Chicago and the week of July 28 in high favor. Five other cities submitted bids.

Glamour is an overworked word in travel folders. But it is the only one that fits Mexico City. Vivid in color and contrasts, there is a matching warmth of welcome for the visiting "Americano."

Most roads in the Republic lead into the hub of its capital city, like spokes in a wheel. When Cortez arrived in 1519 to visit the Aztec emperor Montezuma, the city of Tenochtitlan stood on an island in Lake Texcoco and thousands of canoes piled the waterways. Mexico City, fourth largest in the western hemisphere, now occupies that old lake area—a city as modern as the countryside is primitive.

To know this gay, friendly metropolis, get behind the steering wheel, relax and start your Magic Circle of exploration. Starting at first will be the sight of Indian women walking along the most fashionable streets, barefooted and carrying their babies, who never cry, wrapped tightly in their garments.

Friendly Drivers
Driving in and around Mexico City is not hazardous, although it sometimes seems that no one pays attention to signs and only stops when bumper to headlight with another car. Actually, there is a great deal more courtesy of the road here than we know at home. No one gets angry at anyone else for blocking the way, or being where they don't belong. The drivers all wave to each other, and to you, like life-long friends. You see very few dented fenders.

First objective is National Palace, seat of the president's government, where Diego Rivera's murals describe the entire Mexican history in brilliant color.

Next is the historic Chapultepec Castle, overlooking a beautiful natural park. Here has been the home of the head of state for everyone that has ruled Mexico for more than 300 years, from the Aztecs and Spaniards on through Napoleon's era and to the presidents of the Republic.

Other highlights are the cathedral on the main square, or Zocalo, which is the largest in the western hemisphere. Then there's the National Pawn Shop for bargains, the Aztec ruins, the many markets. And food is a delight in Mexico City; to me there are more outstanding restaurants than in any other city in the Americas.

Does stay up late on Saturday night sampling the glittering night life; Sunday is a gala day of church bells and public excitement. At the main Palace of Fine Arts, the city's Number One building, is the famous glass curtain made by Tiffany in New York. It depicts the two great snow-capped mountains that guard the Valley of Mexico: Popocatepetl, rising 17,882 feet, and her sleeping lady, Ixtaccihuatl, 17,330 feet. During the show moving lights and mood music take you through a day, from sunrise to sunset.

Gala Specters
It also is the best time to visit the widely publicized Floating Gardens of Xochimilco, for Sunday is market day, and boats festooned with flowers take you up and down the canals while other boats sell flowers, trills or handicrafts, and musicians play gaily. For the ladies there are write-home-about corsages of orchids, camellias, gerberas and roses—too large to

News Service Prepares for the Space Age

NEW YORK (AP)—The coming of the Space Age found The Associated Press ready with comprehensive coverage. Frank J. Starzel, AP general manager, said today in his annual report.

"Space Age news coverage demands effective and imaginative reporting and explanation of the unfamiliar with analogy to the familiar," Starzel said.

"The AP is ready," News and Photo Staffers at Cape Canaveral, Fla., and in Atlanta and Washington gave fast comprehensive coverage.

Starzel's 1958 report was mailed to members of the worldwide news cooperative in advance of the AP annual meeting in New York April 20.

The general manager said The AP had made strides both in newsgathering and news distribution in 1958.

He said there were many brilliant and noteworthy achievements and a minimum of failures and disappointments.

"In balance," Starzel said, "it was a year of unusual accomplishment. This was true in the field of newsgathering and, as well, in the field of news distribution here, men and technology combine to serve the membership."

Starzel said that, as an outstanding example of the latter, delivery of the news report to approximately two-thirds of the domestic newspaper membership was markedly improved by a sweeping reorganization.

Southerners to Question Stewart Again

WASHINGTON (AP)—Southerners on the Senate Judiciary Committee said today they plan additional questioning of Justice Potter Stewart about the Supreme Court's school integration decision.

Stewart, formally nominated to the court by President Eisenhower on Jan. 17, already is serving under a recess appointment made last October while Congress was not in session.

The Judiciary Committee heard his confirmation hearing, which got off to a stormy start yesterday, are expected to be resumed Tuesday.

The fireworkers were touched off when Sen. John L. McClellan (D-Ark.) asked Stewart if he agreed with the reasoning and the philosophy underlying the Supreme Court's unanimous 1954 decision declaring racially segregated public schools unconstitutional.

"Basically, the answer is yes," Stewart said at one point. He added, however, he didn't mean he agreed with "all the grammar and all the footnotes" in the court's decision.

Sen. Thomas C. Hennings (D-Mo.) challenged the propriety of McClellan's question. He contended it was unfair to try to commit nominees on issues that might come before them on the court.

Committee members wrangled along themselves at lunch, but in the end Hennings withdrew his objection after Chairman James O. Eastland (D-Miss.) emphasized that Stewart didn't have to answer the question if he felt it was improper.

Stewart then told McClellan that "I can't conscientiously give you a simple yes or no" because of the way the question was phrased.

He said that to do so might disqualify him from participating in cases now before the court in which, he said, the reasoning behind the school decision is being relied on by one party or another.

But adding that he would answer the question at least partially, Stewart declared.

"I would not like for you to vote for me on the assumption or proposition that I am dedicated to the cause of overturning that decision because I am not. I have no prejudgment against any decision whatsoever."

McClellan later told reporters that he expects to question Stewart further along the same lines.

"I don't think he has given a clear-cut answer," McClellan said.

Light Rain Helps Forest Firefighters

BENTON, Tenn. (AP)—With the help of light rain, firefighters today gained control of a big blaze, apparently started intentionally, that threatened the southern end of the big Cherokee National Forest.

Estimates of burned over land ranged from 1,000 to 2,000 acres. Pat Int-Hout, assistant supervisor of the 600,000-acre forest, said crews were mopping up to insure the fire doesn't break loose again. Continued scattered showers were forecast.

The raging blaze in the south east corner of Tennessee near the North Carolina and Georgia border was believed by rangers to have been set by a firebug. 11 rangers asked the FBI to help in the investigation.

At least 15 deliberate "sets" were discovered during the afternoon and early evening. Int-Hout reported.

Red China Says Tibetan Revolt Is Spreading

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
TOKYO (AP)—Red China disclosed today that anti-Communist Chinese were fighting beside Tibetan rebels and admitted the revolt was still seething in the Himalayan kingdom.

The Peiping Radio claimed only that the uprising had been crushed in the vicinity of Chawu, the Tibetan capital, and said Red troops were now proceeding successfully to put down the armed rebellion in other places.

The Chinese Nationalist government on Formosa said about 100,000 Tibetan nomads—sword-wielding Goleks—had joined the revolt in the north.

The Peiping broadcast said the large quantity of arms seized in fighting the Tibetan rebels proved that they were helped by anti-Communist Chinese still fighting in the old Sikkim province of China.

Sikkim borders Tibet in the southwest along the Yungze River, a wild, mountainous region which ranges surging sharply up to 24,000 feet and is separated by canyon-like gorges.

The disclosure that the Sikkim rebels—many remnants of Chiang Kai-shek's army on the mainland—were taking part in the Tibetan rebellion came in a report to the Chinese Communist Central Committee.

Chang Kuei-ha, one of the top Red Chinese experts in trying to convert Tibet to Communism, was quoted as saying "the upper strata of reactionaries in Tibet are closely linked with the rebels in the former Sikkim province (now part of Red Szechwan)."

Chang said the fugitive Dalai Lama's former government in Tibet "came out more and more blatantly to support, supply and arm the rebels when part of the remnants of the former Sikkim province fled to Tibet."

His report—as broadcast by Peiping Radio—did not say when the Sikkim rebels fled.

The flight of the Dalai Lama, the 14th Buddhist leader, reversed by Buddhists as "the Living Buddha," has stirred strong religious feelings in Asia against Red China.

In New Delhi, Indian foreign ministry sources said the Dalai Lama is expected to reach Bombay in northeast India on Monday.

Four hundred people have signed up so far for the test, said Sgt. Bill Miller, head of the records and driver's examiner section at State Police headquarters.

The Marianna Jaycocks wanted to sponsor a safety campaign and after consultation with State Police the voluntary test was devised. Eleven examiners will go to Marianna to administer the tests.

Miller said, State Police have a two-fold objective in the pilot plan: to stimulate interest in a thorough knowledge of traffic laws, and to get some idea of the percentage of drivers whose bad vision contributes to traffic accidents.

We had one case, Miller said, "where a man who was involved in an accident said he didn't see the other car coming. After checking, we found out he could have been drawing aid to the blind."

If faulty vision is uncovered in some volunteers in the tests, Miller said, the drivers will be advised as to what corrective measure should be taken.

Work Orders Issued on River Bridge

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Two work orders for main construction on the new Mississippi River bridge at Helena were issued last night. They went to the John F. Kensley Co. of Dallas, successful bidder on both the superstructure and approaches.

Light, Camera! Reporters! Excitement!

Though you might think that is the description of the recent Oscar Awards in Hollywood, it is exactly what happened at the State Capitol in Little Rock when Governor Orval Faubus was recruited as a member of the Arkansas Heart Association's "walking blood bank."

The center of attention on that occasion was not the man who is known throughout the world by a six year old boy from Hope.

Sam Gammel, Jr., son of Mrs. Sam Gammel, obtained the governor's signature on a pledge card that day. Sammy had undergone a rare type of heart operation last November at the University of Arkansas Medical Center and had received 13 pints of much needed blood during the period of surgery. There was no "walking blood bank" at that time, so medical students at the Center gave their blood.

If that were the whole story, it would be an unskilled version of O. Henry. But Sammy's story is much more. When he was less than two years of age, many respiratory ailments caused examination by a local doctor and the discovery of a heart murmur that possibly meant a hole in Sammy's heart.

The condition itself is not fatal, but it makes the victim susceptible to diseases like pneumonia and blood infections. It wasn't until June, 1953, that the University of Arkansas Medical Center diagnosed Sammy's case and recommended open-heart surgery.

The Gammels returned home, and two days later Mr. Gammel died suddenly—of a heart attack. It was almost more than Mrs. Gammel could stand. Any future decisions about following doctors' recommendations for Sammy would now have to be up to her.

System Set Up to Value Land

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—A Batesville attorney and a Russellville accountant will determine how much money property owners should be paid for land taken for Dardanelle Dam.

Charles F. Cole of Batesville and Russell L. Schult of Russellville were appointed for that task by U.S. District Judge J. Smith Hanley yesterday.

Hanley said he would appoint a third person in a few days.

The task of the three-man commission will be to determine the fair cash value of about 400 acres of land which the government acquired by a condemnation suit in June, 1957.

The government has deposited $41,000 with U. S. District Court here as its estimate of what the land is worth.

Hanley suggested that hearings to set the land values be held in or near Dardanelle.

The dam is to be about seven miles southwest of Russellville and three miles northwest of Dardanelle.

Drivers Will Be Given a Stiff Test

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Can you see well enough to drive? Do you know Arkansas traffic laws?

These challenging questions will be put to motorists of Marianna soon—and hundreds have volunteered to answer them.

On April 16, State Police will administer eye tests and written examination on state traffic laws to the volunteers. It is the first such program in the state and resulted from efforts of the Marianna Junior Chamber of Commerce and State Police.

Four hundred people have signed up so far for the test, said Sgt. Bill Miller, head of the records and driver's examiner section at State Police headquarters.

Hope's Sammy Gammel Was in Spotlight as He Signed Up Governor for Blood Bank

British Income Tax Favors Big Corporations

By FRANK CORMIER
WASHINGTON (AP)—The British income tax, by American standards, hits hard at the man in the street but gives a big break to the investor, the speculator and the gambler.

Even after the tax cut announced last Tuesday, the average Englishman will pay considerably more than his American neighbor.

The investor or speculator, however, will retain complete freedom from taxes on profits made in the stock market or through real estate deals. And the gambler will continue to pay no tax on his winnings.

Moreover, most Englishmen who collect dividends on stocks will—as in the past—pay little or no tax on those.

Dividends, capital gains and gambling winnings are, of course, taxed in the United States.

Why haven't the British tapped these revenue sources?

In the case of dividends, the English take the position that a corporation—by paying income and profit taxes—in effect pays a dividend tax on behalf of its shareholders. To the shareholder, they believe, would be unfair double taxation.

Many American stockholders take the same view and have agitated persistently, but without much success, for a similar concession.

As for capital gains and gambling winnings, these were not classed as taxable income under British law.

The New British tax change, which will go into effect at mid-year, will lower the standard income tax rate to 38 percent from 42½ percent. Here's how the standard tax system works:

While an American taxpayer claims exemptions and deductions to lower his taxable income, the Englishman claims "reliefs" from the standard rate. He gets one relief of $330 for himself and a second for the same amount if he's married. He also can claim a relief of $230 for each of his dependents and can deduct modest amounts for insurance premiums he pays.

On the first $1,000 of income, the tax is based at rates far below the standard level.

Take the case of a married man with two children who is paid $5,000 a year. An American who claims the standard deduction will pay an income tax of about $380. An Englishman in the same situation will pay about $350 under the new rate. The cut will save him about 43.

Answer Filed in Pinball Case

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—An answer was filed yesterday by two pinball machine dealers to a suit by an Arkansas Democrat reporter against the Arkansas Gazette. The dealers are named as parties to the suit.

Harold F. Dunaway and Cecil Hill stated in their answer that tape recordings which they made public Feb. 26 were bona fide and authentic and were not created to produce conversations between themselves and persons they had identified in the recordings.

The suit was filed by Robert Trout in connection with a Gazette story concerning charges made by Dunaway and Hill that they paid Trout $2,000 not to write about pinball machine operations.

In its own answer to the suit, the Gazette said it printed the article in good faith and in the public interest.

The tape recordings were of conversations the men said were between them and Trout.

Trout has denied accepting money from the men and he contends the tape recordings have been altered.

Dieters Get Tired of Such Remarks

BY HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Remarks that dieters get tired of hearing or overhearing.

"Hi, Patty."

"Say, ain't you been gaining a little weight lately?" "This is

"Can you get up off my lap. (taken off 15 pounds.)"

Going on the wagon might help. On the other hand—in your case—it might kill you, too."

"What's that you're carrying under your belt—watermelon?" "There's only one exercise that's any help—and that's pushing yourself away from the table with both hands."

"Hi, Tubby."

"I know just the perfect diet for you. It worked wonders for my uncle. You remember him—the one we buried last week."

"Now take me, for example. I eat anything I want, any time. I want, and I weigh exactly the same as I did 25 years ago."

"Maybe it's your glands."

"Here's an interesting item from the paper. It says obesity is harder to cure than cancer."

"Hi, Louducker."

"Haven't you been losing a little lately? Your hair's gone."

"I guess everything you eat turns to fat, doesn't it?"

"No, I think you girls are all wrong about Grace. If it were what you think it is, she'd be knitting things."

"Can you get up off my lap a moment, Grace? My legs gone to sleep."

"Hi, Chubby!"

"They say her grocer retired last week and bought himself a big new home in Florida."

"Frankly, Grace, I'd think you'd be glad to have a little extra weight like that. I hate myself for being so thin."

"I guess sometimes when you are coupling, you just lose count, eh, Grace?"

"I did not say she was fat. I just said her girls deserved a Purple Heart."

"Hi, Porky."

"Can I tempt you with a little gravy, Jim?"

"Seriously, have you considered psychiatry? Maybe you're a compulsive eater."

"What I wonder, Jim, is who lies your shoelaces for you in the morning."

"All right kids, let's have a race. Whoever runs around Uncle Jim three times first wins."

"Patrol."

"Maybe you ate sugar."

"She never eats between meals, but every time she eats she makes a meal of it."

"She claims she eats like a bird. She must mean a pelican."

"Have you tried eight prunes and a glass of clam juice?"

"A person your size shouldn't wear stripes going that way."

"Hi, Elephant Boy."

"It's called the new atomic diet. You fast for three days and then—"

"If the button ever pops off its vest, it'll be our first successful moon shot."

"Don't lose heart, Jim. Keep your chin up!"

"Hi, Skinny."

Own Idea But It Didn't Work Out

FAIRMONT, Minn. (AP) It was program director Roger Hough's idea to do a live report from the Red Cross bloodmobile for his radio station KSUM, Wednesday.

As a nurse got him ready to donate a pint of blood, Hough began broadcasting to his listeners, telling them there was nothing to it.

"Everything's all right," he told the radio audience. "I'm all right."

Hough passed out.

Mexico City

be worn but the yeast only the change in your pocket.

Sunday is important to the Mexican for another reason: It is the day of the bullfight. They say that in all of Mexico nothing starts on time but the bullfight. At 4 p. m. everyone goes to the bull ring.

No matter how you feel about the gory climax, the pageantry of the color and the excitement of the spectacle is a vivid, indelible experience—even if you are one of the unsunged tourists who walk out before the spectacle is over.

The bull ring in Mexico City is the largest in the world. The best seats for novice spectators, in any bull ring, are high above the action on the shady side. The bull fighters are the idols of the crowd; you see little boys playing football in the streets and empty lots. Instead of baseball as in other Latin American countries.

Mighty Pyramids

Begin your Magic Circle tour outside Mexico City with a visit to the mysterious pyramids 25 miles northeast. Just off the La-Verde highway (Mexico 85). While they rival those of Egypt, the pyramids of Teotihuacan were built centuries ago by the Aztecs, rather than by the Incas. These mighty pyramids to the east and west are the heritage left by a great civilization that disappeared hundreds of years ago.

If you feel a need for limbering up, climb the steps for 200 feet to the top of the Pyramid of the Sun. It's a breath-taking experience in altitude as well as view. There's a restaurant and a museum to interest you while the others make the climb; you also will want to take pictures of the "Highway of the Dead," the Temple of Quetzalcoatl and the stone serpents.

The next morning Magic Circle trip out of Mexico City is south to Cuernavaca and Texcoco. There is a new four-lane toll road, fenced to deter pedestrians and cattle, so you can take the old winding road to see the countryside and villages.

On the way stop to see University City. Not only is the spectacular University of Mexico (enrollment 20,000) built on lava, but its vividly colored buildings are constructed with giant blocks of quarried lava. Aztec and startling in design, it achieves ultra-modern effect beyond compare.

Cuernavaca, famed for its even year-around climate, will always remain in my memory as the city of flowers. They grow in profusion on the walls, houses and everywhere there is an inch of soil to root. There is much else to see in the Borda Gardens, favorite of the ill-fated Archduke, Maximilian, and Carlotta when they ruled over Mexico.

For the first-time visitor to Mexico there are some precautions. Substitute the tropical fruits that can be peeled for fresh vegetables; use bottled water or carbonated drinks. For the sake of your car, keep it filled with the new high octane gasoline when you spot a station that has one of the new grades and white pumps (the Red only oil company). Sun glasses and a light raincoat for your camera also are "musts" in this land of brilliant sunshine and color.

Beer Ads Can Tell All About Product

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—From now on, beer advertisements in Arkansas can tell everything about the brew except how much it costs. The state Alcoholic Beverage Control Board decided this yesterday. The board adopted a regulation prohibiting retail liquor stores from advertising beer prices through newspaper, radio or television notices. An earlier regulation prohibits stores from posting beer prices in windows or on outside signs. These money-board chairman, said such advertisements were "constructed by this department as an inducement to get people into stores to buy liquor, and we feel this is a violation of fair trade laws."

Anthony School Is Accredited

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The state Education Department yesterday granted accreditation to the Anthony School, making it the third

Little Rock private school to receive accreditation since the city's public high schools were closed to forestall integration. Ranney High, operated by the Little Rock Private School Corp. and Baptist High, a church-sponsored school, received accreditation earlier.

OUTDOORS

with John Alden Knight

You remember, of course, the impossible childhood story of the man who killed the goose that laid the golden egg. We laugh at this stupid owner of that fabulous bird but, strangely enough, that sort of thing is still going on in this enlightened age. Florida, the winter playground of the East, is now the fully party.

For the past 11 years we have been spending anywhere from three to six weeks in the Florida Keys each March and April, combining business, vacation, and sunshine treatment in the best interests of our health. Back in 1948-49 the fishing around the Florida Keys was nothing short of superlative. Today it is only slightly better than poor.

Back in 1948 not very many people had heard of the bonefish. Then it was learned that this scrappy could be caught on a fly, with orthodox fly-rod tackle. The Publicity Dept. of the Metropolitan Miami Fishing Tournament set about spreading the joyous word. Then the outdoor columnists of the country were invited to come to the Keys and sample this wondrous new sport.

The boys came to the Keys. They fished for bonefish, were entertained royally, and went home to write about fly-rod fishing in the Keys. Within an incredibly short time just about every fly-rod fan in the nation wanted to come down to the Keys and catch a bonefish.

The real-estate boys, always with an eye open for a quick buck, surely saw no reason to allow all that good publicity to go to waste. They moved in with their bulldozers, power shovels and dredges. Mangrove swamps were transformed into broad sandy areas where subdivision lots could be had for a price.

There used to be excellent bonefishing in the vicinity of Marathon. The power dredge ruined those flats forever. Time was when we could park almost anywhere along the east shore of northern Key Largo, pull on our waders, and go bonefishing.

Not any more. Mile after mile of that area now is taken up by "private estates" and the no-trespassing predominates.

Meanwhile the boat traffic, outboards mostly, in the waters adjacent to the Keys showed a big yearly increase. Where once there had been excellent fishing only a stone's throw from shore, now there is no fishing worthy of the name. It makes no difference what anybody says (University of Michigan Biology Dept. take notice) bonefish, snook, tarpon, etc., simply will not stand for all that disturbance, day after day. They move to quieter waters.

Then the Department of the Interior got some ideas. Headquarters of Everglades National Park used to be at Homestead. That was no good — too far from the park proper. So in came the bulldozers, dredges, and power shovels. A new, wide, hard-surface road was constructed. Acres upon acres of sandy soil, devoid of growth now glare at you where the little fishing village of Flamingo used to stand on its stilts along the waterline.

That was when you could drive in over the dirt road and see the greatest display imaginable of birds, animals and reptiles. Now that new road is unique in one respect — you can look farther and see less than on any equivalent stretch of road in North America. As I say, fish and wildlife simply will not stand for all that disturbance.

Not content with all this, the next move was to begin work on the waterway from Flamingo to Everglades. In came the power tools once more and all that lush, red topsoil which had been accumulating in the mangrove swamps of the western Everglades since time began, started to move with the flow of water as the swamps drained. And there, all of a sudden, went the best snook fishing in the entire State of Florida.

The latest piece of stupidity is the proposed refining company plant to be installed on Merritt Island in the Banana River area of Brevard County on the East Coast of Florida. This is one of the few remaining unspoiled areas, rich in fish and wildlife. If that in-

Burton Back in Hollywood After 3 Years

By BOB THOMAS

After a three-year absence, Richard "Burton" is back in Hollywood — but not for long.

The British star of "The Robe" is out of tunic and into a business suit to play a modern doctor in "Bramble Brue", another probe of morality (or rather immorality) in New England. He said he may stay on for another film, but then he'll be tied up for some time.

He is lined up to play the singing lead in the new Lerner-Loewe show, "Jeany Kissed Me". It's a complete change of pace for the "My Fair Lady" author, being an adaptation of a T. S. White book about King Arthur.

There has never been a week-end like it. That's the conclusion after three fabulous social evenings that saw virtually all of the film famous out in their jewels and minis.

The Buddy Adlers' party for Ingrid Bergman on Saturday night was another memorable one. There can be no doubt how Hollywood regards the long-absent Swede. She was greeted with warmth by all her old friends.

After a Sunday rest, the big names turned out again for the Oscars and the Academy Ball that followed at the Beverly Hilton. No need to yearn for the good old days of Hollywood. They're still with us.

Installation is allowed the resulting damage will be incalculable. Meanwhile, the estimated income created by the fishing on the East coast alone is around $200,000 per annum. The potential for the entire state is many times that.

That, my friends, is a real nice little golden egg. To be sure, the goose is not completely dead as yet, but it is ailing. Of necessity, the golden egg is shrinking. How long, we wonder, will it take Florida to wake up and take steps to safeguard the national resources with which a kind Providence saw fit to endow it?

News Briefs

ARRADELPHIA, Ark. (AP) — A $125,000 building program was adopted by the Osceola College Board of Trustees yesterday. The board also approved a record $871,550 budget.

Plans call for building three new dormitories and additional housing for married students. Property next to the campus will be purchased for future expansion.

EL DORADO, Ark. (AP) — Mayor W. H. McKinney said last night he would call an election on whether El Dorado shall switch to the city manager form of government.

McKinney's announcement came at a City Council meeting at which a group of businessmen presented a petition requesting the election. McKinney did not say when he would call the election.

lege scholarships will be financed by income from a 36-unit apartment building at Pine Bluff, being turned over to the Otto C. Hauber Foundation. Establishment of the foundation, named for a member of the Pine Bluff Rotary Club, was announced here yesterday at a district meeting.

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — About 100 employees of the state Game & Fish Commission completed a two-day training session yesterday in how to check for radioactive areas in case of enemy attack. They will work with state Civil Defense officials in determining areas to be evacuated should the need arise.

NASHVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Dr. and Mrs. Ed Hopkins of Nashville escaped serious injury yesterday when their single-engine light airplane crashed during a landing at Municipal Airport here. They suffered facial injuries and were reported in good condition at a Nashville hospital.

argument at the Empire ranch, Jim Furlong has stopped at the home of a woman rancher, Fern Lindstrom, who fixes up his cuts and warns him to expect no mercy from Cleo Veto, the Empire Foreman.

It was coming sundown when Jim Furlong came to the little valley where his homestead cabin stood in the deepening shadow of Rimrock. Divide Five mother cows, all wearing his JP Connected brand, plodded single file toward an earthen tank at the base of the east slope.

This place wasn't much, compared with some of the homesteads on Mexican Flat. A cow camp, really. But it was a symbol that Jim Furlong was something more than a shiftless saddle tramp.

He had intended to build an addition after selling his steers this fall. Grace Kimble hadn't agreed to share it with him, but she had given him reason to believe she would. On one occasion, when he brought her up here in a rented lively rig, Grace had pointed out where a small garden could be planted. "No wife can't keep her husband properly without a little vegetable patch," she said.

Jim Furlong realized he had the inside track with her, despite the competition of two Mexican Flat bachelors and County Attorney Eggleston. He had really tried to change his ways about whiskey, poker and profanity, the trio of evils that led to fighting, which was a thing Grace couldn't abide.

Furlong cooked his supper, and understanding this was the last time he would sit at his own table, felt more depressed and more alone than he had ever been here.

He was pouring himself a second cup of coffee when Bonanza Beal yelled: "Anybody to home?"

Furlong went to the doorway and watched the old man ride his little Spanish mule into the yard. The brim of Beal's steeple crowned hat was turned up front and back. His coarse gray hair merged with a beard and mustache that hid his face except for a high-bridged nose and sparkling blue eyes. A blue-jean shirt, grease-stained and tucked into worn trousers, was unbuttoned at the waist, revealing a hairy, tanned chest and flat, tanned belly. His faded levis showed multiple patches and his moccasins had long since lost their Ute squaw decorations. A burlap bag bulging with provisions was tied behind his saddle.

"Anything left in the pot?" Bonanza inquired.

"Some," Furlong said. "I'll warm it up."

Furlong watched him trot toward the corral with the Spanish mule taking mincing steps behind him. They were a pair, those two.

When Beal came into the cabin door, he said: "Heard you was to Em. ploy a horse camp break in bones. Just goes to show how wrong them town dudes can be."

"I was, until today," Furlong said, and motioning for him to sit down, related what had happened.

Bonanza wolfed his food as if starving. He nodded his head occasionally as Furlong talked.

Beal peered at him finally in frank disbelief. "It ain't reasonable," he objected. "I never figured you was one to tell a bare naked lie. But this time I think you're crowding the truth more than somewhat."

"No," Furlong said. "That's how it was."

He stepped over to the bunk, untied his blanket roll and picked up the nickel-plated pistol. "Here's what I trimmed Veto's wick with," he said.

Bonanza studied the pistol, he said. "Looks like Veto's for a fact." Appraising Furlong's scarred face, he added, "And you been in a fight."

Beal's blue eyes twinkled in the lamplight and chuckling amusement ruffled his bearded cheeks. "By grab, that's the nicest thing that's happened around here since Ed Overmire's wife had twins."

Afterward, when a bottle had been generously sampled, Beal asked matter-of-factly, "When you leave the country, Jim?"

Furlong shrugged. "I'm leaving this place in the morning, but not Warrior Basin."

Surprised at this, Beal asked, "Won't it be hazardous for you to stay anywhere within five miles of Empire ranch?"

HOPE STAR, HOPE, ARKANSAS

"Suppose," Furlong admitted. "But I'm staying a while, regardless."

"What you figgerin' to do?" "Burn two Empire linebacks after they burn this cabin. Might set a match to a haystack or two, just for good measure."

"And then run?" "When I get ready, yes. But not before."

"So," Beal mused. He took out his pipe and tobacco pouch and said thoughtfully, "One man could give Empire considerable trouble, if he was mean enough. A single man with nobody but himself to look out for."

"You could use my place for a hideout when things got rough or you needed groceries. Aint been there. No cattle that high, and no trail worth mentioning. You'd be safe there for as long as I'll keep it in mind."

"Another place you could hide out is with like Rule over in a badlands. You been to his place?"

Furlong shook his head. "It's about half way between the south slope of the Rimrocks and the Pot Holes — not more'n 10, 15 miles from Empire's west linecamp. Ike is somewhat of a thief, and he's said to be in cahoots with Mexican smugglers, but that's guess-work."

Beal was still with Jim Furlong when there was the sound of wagon wheels in the yard. Furlong stepped out to the stoop.

He watched a team paced into the doorway, a long-reaching shaft of lamplight. Almost instantly, then, he identified Grace Kimble and her father, sitting on the high spring seat. Grace was wearing her pale green gingham dress, the one she usually wore on Sundays, and there was a yellow ribbon in her hair.

"Happy birthday," she called as the team came toward the cabin.

Grace had remembered, which seemed odd; for it had been all most two months ago that she asked about his birthday.

"We went to the horse camp first," Luke Kimble announced. "Stopped at Fern Lindstrom's afterward, and she said you had come home."

Furlong thought: Then they knew about the fight. But it did not seem to matter, for they were both smiling, and now Grace asked with mock politeness, "Aren't you glad to see me, Jim?"

"Yes, yes," Furlong assured. "It's just that you took me by surprise."

"That's what it was supposed to be," she said. "A surprise party for your birthday."

Furlong stepped over to the wagon and offered her a hand down. Grace's smiling face was lovely in the lamplight; one of her black curls brushed his cheek, lovely in the lamplight; one of her black curls brushed his cheek as he helped her down. She said, "We brought a basket of food."

As her feet touched the ground, she added, "A birthday kiss, too," and quickly kissed him on the mouth.

He felt affected, him the way they always did, warming and warming him so that he hugged her tight. But Grace pulled away and there was a startled expression in her eyes as she exclaimed: "Why, Jim — you've been drinking!"

She wasn't smiling now, now was Luke Kimble who had come around the wagon in time to hear his daughter's accusation.

"Well, a little, Jim Furlong admitted.

Bonanza Beal, taking this in from the stoop, said, "Just a drop, Miss. To celebrate his birthday. A bring the bottle, and take a wee nip to keep me company."

Grace ignored Bonanza. She made a small, resolute shape standing there in the lamplight. "Doesn't a promise mean anything?" she asked.

"I just didn't think about it," Furlong said, which was the truth. "Too much on my mind, I guess."

"That didn't please her at all," then a promise isn't important," she accused. "It says your mind and it's forgotten."

Furlong had been standing with his back to the doorway lamp-

Russians to Crack Down on Youths

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

AP Foreign News Analyst

"Peoples' squads" are popping up in many areas of the Soviet Union — particularly in the young Russian republics — to crack down on rising restiveness in the younger generation.

A steady run of reports about youthful violence indicates the Communist party is having serious trouble keeping Soviet youth under its collective thumb.

The items hint of growing discontent with the central rule in Moscow. "People's squads" are described as groups of volunteer workers banded together for the protection of the social order.

The squads are told to try persuasion on violators of the public order. If that doesn't work, the squads are to turn offenders over to the militia.

A group of 60 such volunteers was set up in Tiflis, capital of Stalin's native province, Georgia, where sturdy and independent-minded people long have been a source of trouble for Moscow.

In Yerevan, capital of Soviet Armenia, where Dep. Premier A. I. Mikoyan was born, the party recently held a conference on maintenance of public order.

Once again the establishment of "public order" squads was announced. Party emissaries went to factories and enterprises to explain to workers why the squads are needed.

In Turkmenistan's capital, Ashkabad, whose central Asian people are another minority under Great Russian rule, the party complains about "340 unken and insulting Soviet citizens in the street. A recent squad hauled a clutch of offenders off to the local militia."

These published Soviet reports tend to support rumors from central Europe that the Russians are having trouble with their non-Russian republics. There are rumors of a resurgence of nationalism in the Ukraine, a rich breadbasket for the U.S.S.R. where nationalism always has been strong.

BEST AND WORST ARE EVEN

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Best and Worstville in Ohio are about evenly divided, records here in the capital indicate.

The community of Best in Hahoning County has a population of 25, as does Worstville in Paulding County.

Light, now, as he turned to escort Grace toward the stoop, Kimble asked abruptly: "What happened to your face?"

"Didn't Fern Lindstrom tell you?"

Kimble shook his head and now Grace peered at him, saying, "You've been in a fight?"

"A little trouble," Furlong admitted. Glancing at Kimble, he suggested, "How about you going inside with Bonanza while I talk this over with Grace?"

Luke Kimble's face, apple-cheeked and almost boyish in its lack of wrinkles or blemishes, revealed his disapproval. He said, "Well, it's getting quite late, Jim. We have a long trip home."

"Ten minutes is all," Furlong urged, knowing that this might be his only chance to convince Grace that the fight was no fault of his. "Just 10 minutes."

"Grace said, 'No.' I'll not be sweet-talked by you this night, Jim Furlong. If there's explaining to do it can be done in front of my father-in-law."

It was like a slap in the face to Jim Furlong. Angry, Furlong asked, "What is there to explain?"

"You've a tolerable lot to explain," Grace insisted.

"Aw, now, it ain't that bad," Beal said soothingly. "You know how Jules Pardee is. He tried to force Jim into staying at the horse camp after Cleo Yeto had fired him. All Jim done was to demand his rightful earnings — and it ended up in a fight."

"With Cleo Yeto?" Kimble inquired.

Furlong nodded. "They had him four to one and Jim was right there at Empire. He beat them all."

"Bragged," Beal said. "Did you ever hear the like of that?"

"No," Kimble said solemnly. He peered at Furlong as if studying an absolute stranger. "To fight is sinful," he said, a peacher's conviction altering his voice now and giving it an emotional, thrifty resonance.

Furlong heard Grace saying, "Come, Father, we must go."

Furlong made himself a cigarette. He said, "I've seen her for the last time."

"Well, it might be for the best," Jim said. "I know a feller married on once. A fine big strapping man as was ever met. He could drink a whole jug of Taos lightning and not even show it. Handy with his fists, strong as an ox. But that delicate little wife wore him down to a nubbin."

Beal passed the bottle to Furlong. "She was so refined she wouldn't even let him sleep with out a nightgown in summer, no matter how hot it was."

Except The LORD Build The HOUSE They Labor In Vain That Build It

a warning

Foolish the moth which seeks in the candle, not life but death! Beneath the light there is the burning flame... sudden death for the moth.

A light is a warning to a sailor, a guide to the airman, a beacon to the lost.

It can either save or destroy. Do we seek light or just the flame? Beneficent goods may be turned into destroying weapons.

Food was meant to give health and strength. It is an instrument of good, but given to the glutton, it brings him ruin. Grapes grow for man's sustenance. But when the wine is loved for itself it degrades the body, befuddles the mind and sickens
the spirit. *God gave us His church, His word to light our way. If we use them for good, no harm will come to us. We won't get hurt
as did the moths.*

You In The Church
The Church In You
— form a combination for good. Every man, woman and child needs
the influence of the church. So, come let us go into the house of the Lord. Let us support her program of service to humanity, be a faithful worker, a daily bible reader and attend services regularly.
